

Etienne van Rattingen

Gele vesten plannen een bankrun

Morgen, zaterdag, is het zover. Zal het lukken?

Daar we toch alleen maar bestolen worden door banken en verzekeringsmaatschappijen en de politieke kontenneukers, is het misschien een goede zaak om alle geld van de bank te halen. Vele banken zullen in een paar uur COMPLEET FAILLIET zijn en het financiële systeem in heel Europa zal in elkaar vallen. Voor mij geen probleem. We hebben geen banken nodig want als particuliere banken geld mogen aanmaken uit de gebakken lucht, een privé bank is hetzelfde als een privé persoon dan mag elke burger dit doen.

Protesters plan to empty their bank accounts on Saturday, withdrawing as much money as possible in a bid to undermine the French banks - if not the euro itself. The plan is to "scare the state legally and without violence," forcing the government to adopt the movement's Citizens' Referendum Initiative, which would allow citizens to propose and vote on new laws.

"We are going to get our bread back...you're making money with our dough, and we're fed up," said protester Maxime Nicolle in a video message shared on YouTube.

A well-coordinated financial action has the potential to bring the French banking system - and by extension, the euro - to its knees, as banks always hold only a fraction of the funds the country's citizens have in their accounts. However, most banks limit ATM withdrawals to a relatively low amount, meaning protesters would have to line up inside the banks to withdraw the rest of their money, giving the state plenty of time to place restrictions on withdrawals - though this would, no doubt, spark further protest.

The financial demonstration is a novel means of circumventing Prime Minister Edouard Philippe's proposed crackdown on "unauthorized protests," announced earlier this week after a particularly violent weekend of clashes with armed riot police - including an unexpected appearance by boxer Christophe Dettinger. Philippe has promised 80,000 security forces will be deployed for the next protest.

Zoals Anthony Migchels het zegt op facebook!

We are paying trillions per year in interest to the banksters for absolutely nothing.

The solution is simple: quit their banks. They say we need the banks, because otherwise the real economy would have no money to trade with. All this is complete and utter rubbish, of course. If banks can create credit, then anybody can. That's just common sense.

Just imagine: we are led to believe that we need to cough up trillions just to have a medium of exchange that is completely paper/computer based. I.e., almost free of cost.

[Central bankers create the medium of exchange, coupons called currency, in the form a debt to themselves backed by our government's "credit." In other words, our "money" is credit extended by the Rothschilds. Banks are Rothschild franchises. Why do we trust our money to them? HM] Banking is part of the Babylon Mystery and bankers believe we are still enthralled with their 'fractional reserve banking' sleight of hand.

And they are right. Although people are waking up, they still don't get it.

A good example of this is the 'take your money out of Bank of America' of last October. Bank of America decides to rake in an extra $60 per year with a silly fee. This upset people. While they are paying $300k interest over 30 years on their $200k mortgage. Which the bank created out of nothing the moment they borrowed it.

Meanwhile, 45% of our disposable income is lost to pay for capital included in the prices we pay for our daily needs.

In other words: Penny wise, pound foolish. People still don't understand how they are fleeced through interest on the fictional debt.

Het wordt tijd dingen te veranderen die niemand wil en kan accepteren

Etienne van Rattingen

Maak uw eigen geld. Zie hier hoeveel gemeenschappen al eigen geld gebruiken. Als banken geld aan kunnen maken uit de gebakken lucht dan kan en MAG iedereen dat.

<https://realcurrencies.wordpress.com/2012/04/19/the-swiss-wir-or-how-to-defeat-the-money-power/>

<https://www.bbc.co.uk/news/av/world-europe-12223068/greece-s-alternative-economy-with-bartering>

<https://realcurrencies.wordpress.com/2012/01/03/mutual-credit-the-astonishingly-simple-truth-about-money-creation/>

<https://realcurrencies.wordpress.com/2012/03/07/understand-that-the-banking-system-is-one/>

Alles is al gepubliceerd. Het is te onnozel voor woorden dat banken en de regerende bancaire KONTENNEUKERS ons kunnen blijven bestellen omdat de kudde schapen meer bezig is met voetbal en tennis dan met zijn eigen land en vooral de misbaksels die ons zogenaamd regeren en ons dagelijks beliegen, bedriegen en bestellen!

Banken gebruiken 'geld' om ons te controleren. Dus, kunnen wij 'geld' gebruiken om hen te stoppen. Geld op, is failliet! 'Geld' betekent valuta en valuta heeft niet meer 'waarde' dan het vertrouwen dat iedere eerlijke kloot erin stelt.

Het wordt tijd dingen te veranderen die niemand wil en kan accepteren